1. The former 18th Cav Regt Barracks, located on the east bank of the Vistula River and on the northwestern perimeter of the city, consist of large four-story buildings which, except for the two southernmost barracks buildings, are habitable. Prior to June 1950, the installation was occupied to capacity by a motorized unit which was believed to be a motorized infantry unit. The same unit was observed at the military post as early as 1947. The soldiers, who averaged 20 to 23 years of age, were on active duty. The troops wore brown uniforms with four-cornered caps. When leaving the installation, the troops rode on trucks. Only small arms were observed. No horses or horse-drawn vehicles were seen. Field exercises, in which troops on not less than 25 trucks participated, were held by the unit near Lasin (Q 54/D 73) in 1949 and 1950. *
2. The Jagielly Barracks bordered on the north on the former 18th Cav Regt Barracks. *
3. A training ground used by troops stationed in Grudziadz was located east of the suburb of Kl. Tarpen (Q 54/D 53), on the north side of the road to Lasin. Target ranges were located near the same place.
4. A large number of Soviet troops were seen in the streets of Grudziadz up to 1948. Since that time, Soviet personnel have been seldom observed. In June 1950, a Soviet military headquarters, the function of which could not be determined, was in a former hotel located in the center of the city between the so-called Trinke and the post office.

5. The reconstruction of the destroyed bridge over the Vistula River was still under way in June 1950. At that time, only a temporary pontoon bridge was available.

Naklo

6. Neither Polish nor Soviet troops were observed in the town during a 10-day stay in Naklo (P 54/S 54) in August 1950.
